A. O. U. W.

Grand Convocation of Lodge for Class Initiation.

A RED-LETTER NIGHT.

A convocation of lodges of the Ancient Order of United Workmen in the district, under the supervision of Jas. J. Reedy of Cambridge, which embraces the lodges in the city of Cambridge and Circle lodge of Arlington, was held in Grand Army hall, Arlington, Friday evening. This was the first of a series of similar meetings in the district and in accordance with an outlined plan of campaign which has been adopted throughout the state and has proved highly successful in other districts. The candidates of the various lodges participating, ready for the degrees, were presented in a class, and the work of initiation performed by the degree team of Waltham lodge. Besides the officers and members of Harvard and University lodges of Cambridge and Waltham lodge of Waltham, there were present many visiting brothers from other lodges, including Somerville, Medford and Lexington, besides officials of the grand lodge. Master Workman Charles H. Gannett and officers of Circle lodge presided. After the degree work he introduced these officers of the grand lodge, who responded with brief informal addresses: A. L. Bateman, grand foreman; O. A. Ward, past grand master Workman; J. J. Reedy and F. W. Bayley, grand supervisors; J. R. Kenney and C. H. Harvey, deputies, and C. A. Brown of the finance committee of the grand lodge. At the close light refreshments were served in the banquet hall, after which came the cigars and more informal speechmaking.

The meeting was considered a highly successful one, inasmuch as it has rekindled a spirit of fraternity and awakened an interest in the object and principles of the order which to many are not yet fully understood and appreciated.

FERNANDO MILES HURT.

Fernando Miles, the veteran car-starter at the Arlington Heights station of the Boston elevated railway was seriously injured last Thursday by falling from a Lexington car on his way home to dinner. As he was about to leave the car at his home on Hibbard street he jumped before the car came to a full stop, missed his footing and fell, fracturing the bones of the knee, which, considering his advanced age, is considered an injury from which he will be a long time recovering. Mr. Miles, who is now sixty-five years of age, has been seven years in his present position, and wore six stripes on his arm. He is a Grand Army man, and is prominently connected with the new Methodist Episcopal church at the Heights, and is one of the most popular men with his fellow employees in this division. He formerly lived at Cambridgeport, where he is well known.

RED JACKETS' DEFIL.

The Red Jacket Veteran Firemen of Cambridge, feeling that a great injustice has been done them by the protest against their playing at the Waltham Labor day play-out, and the various newspaper reports of the same, have issued a deft to those who entered the protest against them, and have deposited $500 with the editor of the Cambridge Chronicle, if either of the protesting associations wishes to challenge them for that amount, or over, they will be pleased to meet them and prove with "an open box" that they do not require artificial means or resort to any trickery. This offer will remain open until Jan. 1, 1903.

The facts as reported, that foreign substance was in the water they do not deny, but they disclaim any knowledge of how it came there as will be seen from the following extract from their letter to the Chronicle: "That foreign matter in the shape of grease or tallow came through our nozzle we will not deny, but how it came there we, above all others, would like to know, as it was detrimental to us and caused us the loss of several feet. But here is a point we would like to have explained to us by five wise men?"

"Why was it these supposed worthy officers should pick us out and protest against us when it has been a common occurrence at almost every muster to see an engine throw leaves, shavings, sod, glass, washers etc., and not in one instance was there ever a protest entered?"

As near as can be ascertained in Arlington, the Cambridge firemen have never been accused as an association, and the protest was because the substance was there, not that there was a positive knowledge that any one person known or unknown to the association had put it there for the purposes of fraud or trickery, whatever the suspicions might be in the matter, moreover the consensus of opinion of many disinterested parties is that if either of the fire companies should challenge for the $500, whatever the result, it would not alter the circumstances at Waltham and the letter of the Chronicle seems to be a very clever game of bluff which deceives nobody.

AN EXPENSIVE PROCESS.

Blanchard, Kendall & Co. have about 200 tons of furnace coal on hand at their Winchester yards and in order to meet the demand for stove sizes, this coal is being broken up by men with hammers. The process of converting the larger into the smaller sizes is slow, tedious and expensive, and their is little reason to doubt this firm is losing money even at the high price of $10.50 a ton, which is being asked. Also there is the interest on the plant to be counted on. Unless fresh supplies of hard coal arrive within a few weeks, the probabilities are that not a pound of coal can be had in Winchester at any price from any of the dealers.

YOUNG MEN'S LEAGUE.

The regular meetings have been resumed after the summer vacation. New officers have been elected for the ensuing year. Ten members have joined since July first. All young men are invited to join now.

**Miss Nellie S. Hardy, 54 Lake st., will take two or three pupils in short hand. Her last year's pupils are filling good positions.

THE RICHEST MAN.

The wealthiest man of all I know
Does not possess much gold,
Nor does he own a large estate,
Nor jewelry untold.

No great invention has he made,
Nor glory gained, nor fame
By deeds heroic, and he wears
No handle to his name.

Nor yet enjoys that precious gift,
The very best of health,
For that may disappear with years—
Eternal is his wealth.

No thief can steal his valued prize,
It lies within the man;
A great discovery he has made,
The greatest mortal can.

He sees two sides to everything,
But casts the dark away,
And looks upon the brighter side
That shines as clear as day.

For all through life the bright exists,
Is not his wealth who finds this out,
The greatest that can be?
—Edna Boyden, in the New York Sun.

AN INGENIOUS
BETRAYAL.

"A GENTLEMAN called to see you this afternoon, Mr. Norton," said my housekeeper on my arrival home from the office on evening.

"I gave him your city address, but he said he preferred to see you here, and would call again at 8 o'clock this evening. When I told him you never transacted business here he replied that you would make his case an exception."

I awaited the arrival of my visitor with a certain amount of curiosity. I knew he must have obtained my private address from one of four persons, and that none of the four would have given it to him unless his business proved of the utmost importance.

On the stroke of 8 Mrs. Batty announced his arrival, and a moment afterward ushered him into my presence. I looked at him curiously. He was a keen-eyed, elderly man, with gray hair and mustache, and a forehead deeply scored with lines of care.

"I am Baron Kaluto, the special representative in England of the Barema Government. From the papers you will have gathered that there have been, and still are, in progress important negotiations between your country and my own."

"Yes," I interjected.

"It was not our intention to publish the terms of those negotiations, but they had been betrayed, and no other course remained open to us."

He paused for a moment; then, as I remained silent, continued:

"You boast of the freedom of your press, Mr. Norton, and rightly so. Taken as a whole, your editors are men of high purpose and lofty idealism who appreciate the responsibility of their position and use their power for the good of the nation. But there are exceptions, and the editor of the Early Bugle is one of them. In order to increase the circulation of his paper he would turn every public servant into a Judas, and— But pardon me, Mr. Norton, I did not come here to lecture on the evils of a free press."

He spoke in a tone of great bitterness and his eyes flashed ominously.

"You will understand why I feel so deeply on the subject when I tell you that the items of information concerning the negotiations which have lately appeared in the Early Bugle have been secured by its editor from some treacherous official."

"We have tried in vain to discover the traitor. So, acting upon the advice of a friend, I determined to take you into my confidence and ask you to undertake the inquiry."

I assured him that I should be pleased to do so, and he went on:

"There have been leakages in several departments lately, and your authorities think the traitor is on their side. I am positive that he is not."

"Why?"

"Because the information is not taken from official documents, but is a clever summary of conversations between myself and your representative. And the leakage never occurs when I have visited your Foreign Office, but invariably follows the visit of your representative to our Legation."

"You have taken a great load off my mind by consenting to undertake the inquiry, for, from what I know of you, I am certain if the mystery is to be solved you are the man to do it."

I bowed my acknowledgment of the compliment. Then we discussed the matter in all its bearings, and arranged that I should go and stay at the Legation during my inquiry.

The day following I entered the Legation as his honored guest. I was soon on excellent terms with everybody connected with the establishment. I wandered about the house unmolested, poked into odd corners, talked with the servants, and, in fact, with every one, but never did I come upon a clue which promised to lead to the solution of the mystery.

A week passed and I was no nearer the solution than on the first day of my entrance. Nothing suspicious had happened, and yet an important conversation had been betrayed.

In less than an hour a summary of the conversation appeared in a special edition of the Early Bugle.

Baron Kaluto had not left the Legation. The Foreign Office representative had been shadowed to his office. He had not spoken to any one on his way there. No third person had been present at the interview, and yet the summary was so concise and accurate that it must have been communicated by some one who had listened to the conversation. No other explanation was possible. I was puzzled.

The following afternoon a representative of the Foreign Office called at the Legation and was closeted with Baron Kaluto. An hour later the name of the traitor and the method by which he communicated with the editor were known to me. But how he gained his knowledge I could not tell.

The statement which appeared in the Early Bugle was made the basis of a question in Parliament, and in his reply the Under Secretary stated that it was pure fiction. The members of the Legation smiled knowingly when they read his answer. They thought that, in the interests of his country, he had trifled with the truth.

They were mistaken; he had spoken the truth. The representative who called at the Legation came, not from the Foreign Office, but from my office. He was one of my men, so cleverly made up that they were deceived by his remarkable likeness to the person he represented.

The attaché upon whom my suspicions had fallen, though not likely to make much headway in the diplomatic service, was a really clever electrician, and the Legation was filled with useful and ingenious devices of his invention.

In diplomacy he was a mere waster; as an electrical engineer he might have won both fame and fortune.

He had fitted one of the spare rooms at the top of the house as a workshop, and spent most of his spare time in it, working in a desultory fashion upon the many incomplete inventions with which it was stored. During the interviews he had been in his room, and, if my suspicions were well founded, it was there I must seek the answer to the question—How?

There was a workbench at one end of the room. Under the bench was a cupboard, sufficiently large to admit of my crouching and hiding myself in it. I entered the cupboard and made myself as comfortable as possible. Through a crevice in the door I commanded a view of the whole room.

Just before 3 o'clock the attaché entered the workshop, and, after closing the door, threw a thick curtain across it. Then he seated himself in an easy chair and switched on the light of a single arc lamp, without a globe, placed on an insulated table, and connected with an electric generator.

From my hiding place I gazed at the brilliant light of the lamp, wondering what connection there could be between it and the mystery I was trying to solve.

Suddenly the Baron's voice broke in upon the silence. The sound was so clear and so distinct that I was almost startled into an exclamation of surprise.

For a moment I was puzzled as to where it came from. Then I located it. The lamp was talking!

On the ground floor of the house the Baron was engaged in conversation with the supposed representative of the Foreign Office, and by some strange phenomenon the burning lamp was transmitting the sound with such purity and distinctness that every word was as audible as if we had been present at the interview.

For half an hour the conversation followed the lines agreed upon between the Baron and my representative; then there was a pause, followed by a light, gossiping conversation.

The attaché had listened intently to the conversation so long as it dealt with the matters under concern. As soon as that part of it ended he began to arrange his summary. For some time he wrote and re-wrote. Then he read aloud what he had written. It satisfied him.

A moment afterward he switched off the light and left the room.

As soon as the sound of his footsteps died away I crawled out of my hiding place and strolled into the attaché's room. He was busy arranging a bouquet of choice blooms for a smart society lady of his acquaintance.

"The ladies make great demands upon our time and attention," he said with a smile.

Without speaking I stood and watched him. The message was not, as I had suspected, concealed among the flowers; it was woven into the bouquet, and was easily readable by means of the Morse code, colors taking the place of dot and dash.

His arrangement of the flowers was strikingly beautiful, and as he attached his card to the completed bouquet and distracted one of the servants where to take it, I did not wonder that the simplicity of his method had enabled him to escape suspicion.

The bouquet never reached its destination, and no message appeared in the Early Bugle that evening. Confronted with the evidence of his guilt the attaché made a clean breast of everything.

He had fallen a victim to the charms of a smart society lady, and in order to prove his love for her had consented to supply her with information, and a bouquet of flowers had been the means of communication.

For months past he had openly sent her a daily gift of flowers, so that the continuance of the habit occasioned neither surprise nor suspicion. Upon receipt of the flowers she telephoned the coded message to the editor of the Early Bugle, who had no knowledge as to the source of her information.

Then he explained that part of the mystery which still puzzled me. The lamp in the workshop was connected with a wire with a microphone in the Baron's room. But he could not account for the strange phenomenon which caused it—while burning—to speak. He had stumbled upon the invention by accident, and, under stress of his passion, had kept his discovery secret and put it to base uses. It was the old story of "the woman tempted me."—New York News.

THE COACHMAN'S PASSING

The Old Timers Disappeared From the Earth When Railroads Came.

One often wonders what became of the old coachman when railways drove the last of the mails off the road and those who had known few pleasures that were not associated with the movements of lively teams and the hum of rolling wheels or genial intercourse with the traveling world could enjoy those things no more. There must be deep pathos in the unwritten romance of that period. With few exceptions, the drivers of stage coaches had no aptitude or inclination for other work, though they were masters of their own. Many a time in boyhood I have heard amateur whips pay admiring tribute to the professionals of an older generation who, for all their dissolute habits and uncounted, were workmen to the core with hands as gentle as a woman's. Bob Pointer, who taught many Oxford under-graduates how to handle an awkward team, was one of the hard drinkers, but nobody ever saw him in "difficulties" to which his skill was not equal. His wise maxims are still remembered and worth remembering: "Never let your horses know you are driving them, or, like women, they may get restive. Don't pull and haul and stick your elbows akimbo; keep your hands as though you were playing the piano; let every horse be at work and don't get flurried; handle their mouths lightly; do all this, and you might even drive four young ladies without ever ruffling their feathers or their tempers."—From the "Old Road Coach," by Henry H. S. Pearce, in Outing.

Earth's Disturbances.

Mother earth has evidently started in this year to break all records during historic times of gigantic destructive disturbances.

For the first half of the year we have to charge her unusual restlessness with 48,900 lives through volcanic eruptions and earthquakes. Her tornadoes have hurled 465 human beings out of existence, and cyclones have added 240 more to the list, while other storms in great numbers, but of less dignity in name, have placed 720 to the direct account of violent winds. Floods have swept 345 persons from life, tidal waves have drowned 110 and waterspouts have destroyed 15.

To all of this we must add 283 lives charged to the destructive force of avalanches and snow slides, and we have a total of 51,078; an astounding mortality from these three agencies of destruction in one-half of a year.

Sea Voyages.

The advantages of life at sea are the entire rest and the absolute necessity of almost living in the open air that is forced upon the patients. There is besides the absence of dust, the equality of temperature, the inhalation of the saline particles that find their way into the air, together with the electrical stimulation of the ozone so plentiful at sea. Besides the moist atmosphere the ocean has that distinctly sedative effect that occurs in a moist climate with a high barometer. An added benefit is the tonic effect of a complete change from ordinary life on land. Life and life possesses the sedative tonic influences of the ocean without the ennui of a long sailing voyage. These sailing voyages for therapeutic purposes should now be reserved only for dipsonanias and errant sons.—Philadelphia Record.

The Medal of Honor.

The much coveted medal of honor bestowed on officers and enlisted men of the army for exceptional acts of personal heroism, is a five-pointed star of bronze, tipped with trefol, each point containing a crown of laurel and oak. In the centre, within a circle of thirty-four stars, America personified as Minerva, stands with her left hand resting on the fasces, while with her right, in which she holds a shield emblazoned with the American arms, she repulses discord, represented by two snakes in each hand. The whole is suspended by a trophy of two crossed cannons, balls and a sword surmounted by the American eagle.—Washington Star.

No Cause For Alarm.

Rev. Brown, a man of less than medium stature, possessed a high, squeaky voice.

Not long ago he was invited to exchange pulpits with a minister in a neighboring city. The church in which he was to preach was much more imposing than the home chapel.

Arriving early he peered from behind the pulpit and watched what he considered an immense congregation with trepidation.

As the last notes of the organ voluntarily died away his little head popped up from behind the desk, and without a word of warning he piped out, "It is I, be not afraid."—Lippincott.

TO MAKE CHILDREN HAPPY.

A Little Gift of Money is Considered the Best Way.

He who would make little children very happy should give them, now and then, small sums of money—a few pennies, a nickel, a dime or even a quarter.

A group of married men discussed this question in a cafe the other night, and they agreed that they could remember no greater joy of their childhood than an unexpected tip from some grown-up friend. One of the men said:

"I remember how on a bright May Saturday afternoon I was penniless once. Saturday afternoon is the time of all times when a little boy should have money, and therefore I was very blue. But suddenly a half-dollar was slipped into my hand by a broker from New York, who was visiting my uncle. Will I ever forget my joy? I hired a row boat for an hour, and took out in it all my 'gang.' I bought cigarettes freely, and I also invested heavily in candy."

A second man said: "I remember how the first quarter I ever had was given to me by a great-aunt when I was about six years old. Do you know what I bought? I bought 25 penny whistles. I went home with all my pockets and both hands filled with those musical instruments. My, but I was happy."

A third man said: "Whenever I would get tips I would buy brown sugar with the money. I was very fond of this rich-colored, moist, heavy-bodied sugar, with its sweet odor, but my family didn't keep it in the house because it was very cheap. I'd buy it by the quarter-pound, and eat it out of the bag with my silver spoon."

"Once my brother-in-law gave me a large sum of money, and I bought a bale of hay with it," said another man. "I was about seven, and the hay, set out on the pavement before a feed shop, took my eye with its clean smell and its golden color. So I bought it to play with. 'Us kids'—for no child ever said 'we kids'—opened up the hay in our garden, and we had a great deal of fun rolling about in it. I sold it finally, at a reduced rate, to my father for the horse."—Philadelphia Record.

An Excellent Reason.

"Never cross-examine an Irishman," advised a prominent lawyer. "Yes; I'm speaking from experience," he continued. "The only witness who ever made me throw up my hands and leave the court room was a green Irishman. A shunter had been killed by an express train, and the widow was suing for damages. I was engaged by the railway company, and had a good case, but made the mistake of trying to turn the main witness inside out."

"In his quaint way he had given a graphic description of the fatality, occasionally shedding tears and calling on the saints. Among other things, he swore positively that the locomotive whistle was not sounded until after the whole train had passed over his departed friend. Then I thought I had him."

"See here, McGinnis," said I, "you admit that the whistle blew?"

"Yes, sorr; it blew, sorr."

"Now, if that whistle sounded in time to give Michael warning, the fact would be in favor of the company, would it not?"

"Yes, sorr; and Mike would be testifyin' here this day."

"The jury giggled."

"Never mind that, you were Mike's friend, and you would like to help his widow, but just tell me now what earthly purpose there could be for the engineer to blow that whistle after Mike had been struck?"

"I phrased that the whistle wore for the next man on the track, sorr."

"The widow got all she asked."—Answers.

An Offertory I O U.

A novelty in the collecting bag is reported from Marlow, says the Westminster Gazette. The vicar was accosted at the flower shop by a visitor, who inquired if he had found an I O U for a shilling in the bag at the church service last Sunday. The vicar replying in the affirmative, the visitor remarked that he would discharge the debt, and tendering a shilling he explained that when he arrived at church on Sunday he discovered that he had left his purse behind, and thereupon he made out the I O U, which he placed in the offertory bag. In future, therefore, nobody will have an excuse for saying that they left their purse at home.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION IS SYSTEMIC CATARRH.

(Pe-ru-na is the only Systemic Catarrh Remedy known in the Medical Profession.)

MRS. IDA L. GREGORY
A LEADING CLUBWOMAN OF DENVER, Colo.

Mrs. Ida L. Gregory, President of the Poets' and Authors' Club of Colorado, President of Colorado Art Club, Director of School of Industry and Design, Vice-President of Sherman Art League, is one of the leading Club Women of Colorado.

In a recent letter from 2 Grant avenue, Denver, Colo., this prominent lady says:

"Some years ago my husband suffered from nervous prostration, and, after trying a friendly druggist, he brought home a bottle of Peruna. His health was restored from its use, his appetite was increased and restful sleep came to him. I therefore heartily endorse Peruna as an honest remedy worthy the good things which are said of it."—Ida L. Gregory.

Nervous prostration is so frequently associated with systemic catarrh that some doctors do not distinguish between the two. In systemic catarrh the disease has pervaded the whole system and there is a constant loss of vital fluids from the mucous membranes.

A great many people are doctoring for nervous prostration who would be immediately cured by a course of Peruna. Peruna makes clean, healthy mucous membranes. By this preservation of the fluids the weakening drain of their discharge is prevented. The medical profession is just beginning to awaken to the fact that chronic catarrh, especially systemic catarrh, will soon produce a condition so nearly resembling nervous prostration that it is very difficult to tell one from the other.

Peruna cures these cases without fail.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

A CORRECTION
In justice to Mr. Edward C. Stone, we would say that in our edition of last week we unintentionally omitted certain quotation marks in the following paragraph which should have been printed as follows:

Now, let us call to mind a few facts. The superintendent of the Lexington & Boston Street Railway company brought down a large number of the railway men to help defeat me as moderator; the same officer of the company brought down, in company with Mr. Taylor and his friends, an equally large number of the railway men to register as voters; and the same officer of the railway company is an honored and constant attendant at the meetings of those actively engaged in Mr. Taylor's candidacy. Bearing these facts in mind, must not one be forced to the conclusion that there is some one beside myself—adopting the language of the committee,—whose "lack of stability and experience is strikingly shown in this very matter?" "For although he claimed to be opposed to the street railway company, he seems to have lent himself to and draws most" (we won't say quite that) "of his support from" one of the leading officers of the Lexington representative "of that element, who is actively engaged in his behalf and will naturally" (on account of alleged willing wagers on Mr. Taylor's success) secure at least some of the "credit and prestige which would follow" Mr. Taylor's election. Remember,—these words are not mine, but those of the committee.

The Boston Globe says proper recreation prolongs life. This fact is now better appreciated by busy people than ever before. Of all the forms of recreation the best, perhaps, is traveling. The benefits to be derived from it cannot be exaggerated. A journey, whether brief or long, is sure to relieve the mind of business or domestic cares by directing it into pleasanter channels. Thousands can testify that traveling has improved their health, lengthened their lives and brightened their mental faculties more than anything else.

Dwellers in mosquito-infested parts are strongly recommended to wear as much yellow and to have as much yellow about them as possible. This advice comes from a French scientist, who has been investigating the psychology of the little pest. One of his tests was as follows: He took a certain number of boxes and lined their interiors with cloth of different colors and different shades of the same color. Then he liberated in the room a large number of mosquitoes, believing that the colors in the boxes would attract them. At the end of a certain time he closed his boxes and then began to count. He found that the insects had a decided liking for dark colors in preference to white, and that the most were found in the box which had been lined with dark blue. Not a single one was found in the box which contained yellow. This test may not be conclusive, but it seems to prove that there is something in the tradition that dark stockings attract more mosquitoes to the ankles than do light ones.

AROUND THE HUB

(Special Correspondent.)

As the days go by without any apparent change in the strike situation, it begins to develop that the fuel situation in Boston and vicinity is really becoming more serious than even some of the local coal dealers themselves were aware. Not only has the supply of anthracite been practically eliminated, but there is now looming up a famine in soft coal, upon which the average householder has been implicitly pinning his faith, in the event of continuation of the strike of the anthracite miners. For certain reasons the scarcity of soft coal is likely to become as pronounced as that of anthracite, while the final hope of the consumer, the local coke supply, has already been far out-stripped by the demand. Even wood, which might do at a pinch, is soaring to unheard-of prices, and the threatened scarcity of bituminous coal, which is the main reliance of the gas companies, has suggested to more than one of these the possibility of a shut down and the consequent deprivation of gas for use in the kitchen ranges of their consumers.

Death claimed in New York the past week a Bostonian who was one of the oldest booksellers in that city. The firm of C. S. Francis & Co., was in its day the most popular establishment of its kind in the metropolis. David G.

Francis was born in Boston in 1817. His brother, Charles S. Francis, founded the firm. Charles Francis was 10 years his brother's senior and was the oldest son of the senior partner of Francis & Munroe, the Boston publishers, who were the first in New England to print the works of Shakespeare. It was in their store that both the Francis learned printing and bookbinding. In 1826 Charles Francis went to New York and opened a store on Broadway near Dey street. Later he moved to 252 Broadway. In 1843 D. G. Francis became a member of the firm. In 1855 the store was moved to 554 Broadway. It was there that the authors of the day met every Saturday at least to see the new books of the week. Friday was publishing day and the new books reached the dealers on Saturday.

The Boston & Maine railroad has taken unusual steps to prevent the use of season tickets by persons other than the ones to whom they are issued. A circular issued by the passenger department of the road says: "On account of the many abuses of season tickets which have been brought to our attention, it has been decided that hereafter all season tickets reading between points where the three months' rate is $50 and over shall bear the photograph and autograph of the person in whose name they are issued. Intending purchasers will, therefore, present, when ordering tickets, an unmounted photograph of recent date, in size 2x2 inches. Agents will forward photographs to this office with the order, carefully noting whether it is a good likeness or not; if not, refusing same. If the ticket is presented by any one to whom the description would not apply, it must be lifted, name and address of holder ascertained and full report forwarded to this office with the ticket."

Boston is to have a police parade early in November, the actual date being as yet undecided. Chairman Clark so states and intimates that the parade will be the superior of any of former years. The last police parade was in the fall of 1895, and since that time there have been many changes, both in the membership of the department and improvements in equipment. It was intended to have a parade a year ago, but it was postponed owing to the local labor troubles at that time, which made such strenuous demands on the time and strength of the men that the parade was postponed for a year. Captain Donovan, the drill master of the department, who was assigned to headquarters a year ago, has been hard at work through the spring and early summer, drilling the men, and bringing them into condition for the coming parade, and it is said that the members of the department were never in such good form as at present.

There was great rejoicing among the musicians, chorus singers and orchestras of Boston when the news spread of the appointment of George W. Stewart of the Boston Festival orchestra, manager of the bureau of music for the Louisiana purchase exposition. Mr. Stewart will have entire charge of the music of the exposition and will engage all bands, choruses and orchestras. As soon as the news spread of the appointment of Mr. Stewart, his office at 120 Tremont street was filled with applicants who had all sorts of suggestions to make and who would perform musical feats which would make the coming exposition the greatest one musically in the history of the world. Mr. Stewart was one of the organizers of the Boston Symphony orchestra, was one of the 10 musicians with whom Henry L. Higginson consulted when it was formed and was an active member for many years. For 10 years he was manager of the Germania band in Boston and in 1888 organized the Boston Festival orchestra. For the past 12 years he has arranged musical festivals all over the United States.

Man has not a monopoly of coughing. Before there was a vertebrate on the earth, while man was in process of evolution through the vegetable world, Etada Tussien—that is what the botanists call him, while we know him as "the coughing bean"—coughed, and blew dust out of his lungs. Recently botanists have been giving special attention to this bean, and tell interesting things about it. It is a native of warm and moist tropical countries, and objects most emphatically to dust. When dust settles on the breathing pores in the leaves of the plant and chokes them a gas accumulates inside, and when it gains sufficient pressure there comes an explosion with a sound exactly like coughing, and the dust is blown from its lodgment. And, more strange still, the plant gets red in the face through the effort.

The first turkeys—which are natives of America—were seen in South America in 1523, by a Spanish explorer. In 1608 the settlers in Virginia sent 20 to England—the first sent from the country included in the United States.

KICKED BY A COW.
Samanthy Green met with a Painful Accident at Mason's Corner but it convulsed a Great Crowd.
Samanthy Green, the maid-of-all-work for Mrs. Hepzibah Putnam, went down to the cross-roads at Zeke Pettengill's last evening to borrow some milk. Pettengill told her to go and help herself. It is supposed she must have tried to milk the wrong cow, as it was dark in the barn. Spectators first heard a terrible racket, then her milking pail and shawl and hat came flying through the barn door, closely followed by Samanthy. When she gathered sufficiently for an explanation Samanthy said she thought the cow must have kicked her.
An audience of 4000 people packing the Boston Theatre from pit to dome witnessed the incident in "Quincy Adams Sawyer" last night and laughed, screamed and roared as they never did before. It took ten curtain calls to quiet the audience. For the benefit of those who did not see Samanthy kicked out of the barn by the cow last night, she will repeat the performance every night this week and next week and at the Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

The epidemic of gayety and effulgent farcical effusion, entitled "Happy Hooligan" is being presented at the Boston Grand Opera House this week by a score of clever comedians, vocalists, terpsichorean wonders, specialty artists and funny farce delineators, picked from the very cream of the profession and recognized and acknowledged by the press and managers throughout the country as being the strongest and most valuable "Headliners" ever merged into one organization. The comedy is based upon the Fred Oppen caricatures of the good-hearted tramp, who tries to do all he can for others, but always gets "done" himself. This gives the author a very strong chance to write a most amusing comedy, the funniest of situations and strong climaxes. The scenery is all new, and the costumes are an innovation in stage attire and the music new, popular and catchy. There will be matinees, Thursday and Saturday as usual, as well as the evening performances.

CASTLE SQUARE THEATRE.

The attraction at the Castle Square Theatre this week is the famous romantic play by the younger Dumas, "Camille," this being its first production at this theatre. The play, and the novel upon which it was founded, have made the story of the heroine known the world over, and few dramas of the last century have enjoyed more wide-spread popularity. It is a well-known fact, in the life of young Dumas, that the novel and its subsequent dramatization were the events that made the foundation of his financial success, and the play has been the cause of many a fortune in the dramatic world since then. The heroine was taken from one of his associates, Alphonsine Plessis, known in the world of Paris as Marie Duplessis, who was the daughter of a small farmer in Normandy and startled Parisian circles in 1843 by her beauty and grace, just as the younger Dumas was at his wits' ends to save himself from financial ruin. The cast of the leading characters will be, Armand Duval, John Craig; Mons. Duval, James L. Seelye; Gaston Rieux, James MacLarnie; Count de Varville, John Salpinx; Gustave, George E. Mack; Arthur, B. F. Duffy; Messengers, Louis Thiol; Camille, Lillian Lawrence; Madame Prudence, Leonora Bradley; Nichette, Mary Sanders; Nanine, Letitia Jewel; Olympe, Jane Irving.

ENGLISH GRAND OPERA.

The musical festival of grand opera in English which has been announced for the Tremont theatre for some time has become a reality. The organization which is presenting this round of operas is under the direction of Henry W. Savage, and it is confidently stated that it is the best singing organization in this country. "From a production standpoint the operas will be put on the stage with the same elaborate care as if the prices of admission were those which are generally charged to witness performances of this kind, when in reality there is to be no advance in the regular schedule charged at the Tremont theatre. One opera will be sung on Monday, Tuesday and Saturday evenings and at the Wednesday matinee and another on Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday evenings and at the Saturday matinee. The bills for this week is "Il Trovatore" and "Faust" and these operas will be sung in the order named.

As a result of the unusually rigid medical examination to which pupils of the public schools are being subjected this year, almost 2000 children have already been excluded, although the work of inspection is barely more than half through. For five years there has been a scheme of medical examination in the schools, but at the beginning of the present school year President Lederle of the health board made up his mind that it was not thorough. He had a large number of school medical examiners on his rolls at $30 a month each. He discharged two-thirds of them and raised the salaries of the remaining third to $100 a month. Each school medical examiner has three schools now to attend to. He goes to the first school at 9 o'clock in the morning, inquires of the principal whether there are any cases requiring his attention, and if there are, attends to them. He does the same with the second school, but on arriving at the third school on his list makes a tour of each room and examines every pupil in it. The next day one of the other schools is examined in the same way and the third day the other one gets this thorough attention. The result of this system is that every public school pupil in the city of New York is examined by a health board doctor every third day.

The largest tree in the world is said to have recently been discovered in Africa in the region of the Upper

Interclub Tennis.

The Interclub tennis tournament at Lexington Saturday resulted in a victory for the Arlington golf club in two out of three of the matches played.

Butters of Old Belfry succeeded in pulling out his match with Hardy after three hard-fought sets, but the Arlington men took the other two with ease.

At Belmont, on the courts of the Belmont tennis club, the home team won both matches in singles from Andover, but lost in doubles.

As a result of this afternoon's play
Old Belfry and Belmont are again tied for first place. Both clubs have three more matches to play, Old Belfry against Andover and Belmont against Arlington. The summary:

At Lexington: Butters, Old Belfry, beat Hardy, Arlington, 5-7, 8-6, 6-2.
Bayley, Arlington, beat Redmond, Old Belfry, 6-3, 6-4. Hardy and Bayley, Arlington, beat Butters and Turner, Old Belfry, 6-4, 7-5.

At Belmont: Brown, Belmont, beat Dundas, Andover, 6-4, 6-0.
Underwood, Belmont, beat Fairchild,
Andover, 6-4, 6-3.

Dundas and Hitchcock, Andover, beat Underwood and Horne, Belmont, 9-11, 6-3, 6-3.

Prevented the Game.

More than 300 came to Lexington Sunday from Cambridge and Lowell to attend a picnic given by the Cambridge aerle of the Fraternal Order of Eagles to the Lowell aerle.

The program included various races and athletic contests, and, it is said, was to wind up with a ball game, but the police got wind of it, and Chief Franks and Patrolman Maguire appeared on the field and stopped the proceedings.

Golf Contest.

The invitation mixed foursomes on the Lexington golf club links Saturday proved a great success. Mrs. G. Keyes and Mr. A. S. Graves, both of Concord, being the winners, with a net of 84,
which is considered a very low score for these links.

The moonlight putting contest was held at 7 o'clock, and though the moon was hidden by a fog bank, all the participants expressed themselves as much pleased with the event.

There were 40 entries and 16 qualified
The semi-finals were between T.
Briggs and P. C. Lockwood, and in the finals Briggs won by the score of 2 up.
The lawn in front of the club house was beautifully lit up by numerous Japanese lanterns, and a fine band concert added to the general enjoyment of the occasion.

LEXINGTON LOCALS.

Mrs. Durkee, housekeeper for the Kendall brothers on Bedford street, North Lexington, is recovering from a severe illness from pneumonia.

Miss Nellie M. Mason of Massachusetts avenue, returned last week to her position as teacher at Andover Academy.

The Boston and Maine railroad is soon to make several much needed improvements about Depot square, among which are grading the street to facilitate surface drainage and concreting the walks.

Independence Lodge, A. O. U. W., will observe its twentieth anniversary on Friday evening by a public reception to the families and friends of its members, with a program consisting of vocal and instrumental music and a synopsis of the history of the lodge. A visitation of some of the grand officers is expected. Messrs O. F. Glenn, A. H. Burnham, and W. F. Whitaker, the committee are actively engaged in making preparations to make this a red-letter night in the history of the lodge.

**The Misses Brooks will re-open their school on Sept. 25, 1902. Special arrangements may be made for classes in Sloyd and Drawing.

At the Baptist church next Sunday, after regular sermon, the services will be given over to a special rally, and to the observance of Bible study.

Louis H. Gossom, the East Lexington milk dealer, while in Arlington last week was seized with an attack of vertigo, and was brought home by Dr.
Percey of Arlington. At this writing he is able to sit up.

At the Baptist church Sunday Rev.
Mr. Macdonald preached a very sensible and opportune sermon on "The Spiritual Basis of Labor," the application being to the present coal strike.

A supper and social will be given this evening, in charge of the Ladies' circle of the Baptist church, at the home of the pastor, Rev. F. A. Macdonald. Supper from 6 to 8 o'clock.

A team match was shot Saturday at the Lexington military range between battery B, first heavy artillery of Cambridge and Company B, first corps cadets, resulting in a victory of 53 points for the artillery team.

The conditions were ten men to a team and ten shots to a man at 200 yards. Capt. Lombard led the shooters by the score of 46 out of a possible 50, but was closely followed by Private J. W. Blake with 43 and Lieut.
Underwood with 44. The totals were:
Artillery, 425; Cadets, 372.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

The radiations of radium have proved to be of rare value in medicine.
It is found that a metallic screen interposed between the eye and a vial containing radium in no way prevents the healthy eye from seeing it. If the retina of a blind person be healthy, it will be effected by radium rays even though the cornea be opaque to light rays. Consequently the radiations from radium can be used to discover whether or not the retina of a blind person is healthy.

Malaria and yellow fever are not the only diseases that the pestilent mosquito is charged with communicating. A physician in New York City recently certified that a child died of erysipelas communicated by the bite of a mosquito. This was new to the Board of Health, and a careful investigation was ordered, conducted by the coroner's physician, with the result that the certificate was accepted, for no other reasonable cause could be discovered.

Some interesting observations concerning the surgical treatment of wounds by birds were recently made by a Swiss naturalist. The most interesting example was that of a snipe, both of whose legs he had unfortunately broken by a misdirected shot. He recovered it the following day, when he found that the poor bird had contrived to apply dressings of down from other parts of its body, fastened by congealed blood, and a sort of splint of interwoven feathers to both limbs.

An important paper has recently been published by Dr. Selim Lemstrom of Helsingfors on the use of electricity as a plant fertilizer. His experiments show that for plants growing on arable land of medium quality an increase of 45 percent in the crops is obtainable, the better the field is tilled the greater is the increase; on poor soil the effect is trifling. Certain plants, such as peas, cabbages and turnips, do not respond to electrical treatment until after being watered.
Electricity applied when the sun is shining strongly is almost invariably injurious.

Very wide interest has been taken in the spectrum of lightning, photographs of which have been obtained at the Harvard College Observatory.
These were made by pointing a telescope provided with an objective prism toward a portion of the sky where lightning was particularly bright. The spectrum is not always the same. Many of the lines appear to be due to hydrogen. The first line is a broad, bright band extending from wave-length 3830 to 3930, and may be identical with the nebular line 3875. The spectrum of lightning is curiously like that of the new star in Perseus and other new stars.

H. B. Carpenter, a civil engineer, who has just completed the survey of the southern line of Utah, says the boundary between that state and Arizona does not cross a foot of cultivated land. It traverses a desert, which is cut up by great canyons that are almost impassable. The length of the line is 277 miles. Landmarks along the line will make it possible for the boundary to be located without any difficulty in the future. Just east of the Colorado river a sandstone butte rises 1000 feet above the plain, and the very peak of this butte is exactly on the boundary. Mr. Carpenter named the peak State Line Butte.
Not far from this butte is another, which stands 1300 feet above the plain, and was named Tower Peak.
These two gigantic stones will always be a guide to persons who have enough curiosity to penetrate the desert in search of the state line.

Dogs have a great history. They did not spring from the wolf as popularly believed, but from species of wild dogs, which still exist in some countries. They have been worshipped by the ancient Egyptians; Queen Elizabeth had 800 trained blood-hounds to fight the Scotch; Alexander built a city in honor of a favorite dog; and in England dogs used to be fattened and driven to market for table use like our hogs.

Black Adventure.

A Boer Heroine.

THE party of Boers who have come to England with the generals include many who have had exciting experiences during the war. In talking to them you realize that it has been quite as much a woman's war as a man's on the side of the Boers. Perhaps, indeed, the most permanent fact that will survive in history will be the part that has been played by the women. Take the case of Mrs. De La Rey. She has been actually "in the field" for eighteen months. She does not look like it. She just looks a kindly middle-aged mother of a family who has lived quiet all her life.

It all arose in this way. In the course of "guerrilla" war General De La Rey would occasionally come and visit his wife in a manner that perplexed and annoyed General Methuen perhaps more than anything else happening in the war. It certainly must have been annoying, but perhaps the best plan would have been to have grinned and borne it. Unhappily, this was not the rule with the British general when he found himself crossed by Boer women. It was intimated to Mrs. De La Rey that she must pledge herself not to give lodgings to her husband. Now, Mrs. De La Rey is a plucky woman and a devoted wife. She refused. "As long as I live," she replied, "I shall give lodgings to my husband when he comes to me." "Very well, then," Lord Methuen intimated, "you must go into camp." But Mrs. De La Rey refused to go into the camp. "Give me a wagon," she said, "and I will go and shift for myself." So they gave her a wagon, and they asked her where she was going. "Into the wide world," she said, and she went.

That was at the end of the year 1900, and from that time until the end of the war Mrs. De La Rey wandered about the veldt, now sleeping in one place, now in another, always on the eye of being captured, sometimes escaping by the barest interval of time from the pursuing columns. She carried her children with her in the wagon and cooking utensils sufficient to live a tolerable life. The plucky lady occasionally found a house where she could spend a night or two, but for the most part she was perpetually on the move, and perpetually keeping her weather eye open for the pursuing columns. Every now and then General De La Rey would visit her, and on one occasion he came to her sick, and she nursed him. But while he was lying sick in the farmhouse the columns came upon them. General De La Rey leaped out of bed, and, with the help of a small command of men with him, fought off the attack and succeeded in escaping. On another occasion Mrs. De La Rey proved more clever than her husband. He was proposing to rest a night in a farmhouse, but she did not like the look of it. Her military eye seemed to see danger. So she persuaded her husband to move. It was fortunate that she did so, as the enemy came to that farmhouse immediately when they had left. Mrs. De La Rey was wandering in this manner when she heard that her husband had captured Lord Methuen. At first she would not believe it, but when she found it was true she made her way to her husband's laager. She said she wanted to see Lord Methuen and have a talk with him. She took with her a fowl and some provisions as a present. Lord Methuen consented to see her, and was obliged to tell her that he had destroyed her house. Mrs. De La Rey must have got some Christian consolation after presenting him with the fowl and helping to nurse him.

Then came the question what De La Rey should do with his prisoner. The young Boers were all against giving him up, because he had treated Mrs. De La Rey in a manner they did not approve of. But General De La Rey and his wife took a larger view. "What can we do with him?" they asked. "If we keep him? If he goes with us he will probably die on one of our treks, and then his blood will be put to our charge. Better be generous and hand him back." The general had some difficulty with his men, but at last persuaded them. And so General and Mrs. De La Rey performed an act of high generosity, which was probably the strongest influence in bringing the war to an end. But it seems to us that the generosity of Mrs. De La Rey was even greater than that of the general. Certainly in her eighteen months' campaign she showed quite as much strategy as any of the Boer generals in escaping. What a pity it is that this tale of woman's heroism cannot be fully told, and that we cannot place it in history as a pendant to the wanderings of De Wet.—London Daily News.

"Gurdie" Got the Guns.

"Gurdie" has not been quite fairly dealt with by history. The name is seldom heard nowadays, but it belonged to an energetic, brave woman, who in Revolutionary times had the applause of her country for cleverly outwitting a part of the British army.

"Gurdie" lived at Union, N. J., in those days a place aspiring to be the capital of the State. One finds it today fast asleep, away from railroads and even trolley cars. Her husband was known either as the man with the stovepipe hat, a mark of aristocracy then out of the ordinary, or as the man with the stumbling tongue. His most salient characteristic was his admiration for Gurdie.

When the British came up the little elevation known as "the hill" at Union and entered the precincts of the sacred First Presbyterian Church, taking the hymn books and Bibles from the pews and ruthlessly tearing them to use as wadding for their guns, it was Gurdie who boldly spoke up and asked: "Is that the way you're going to give us Watts and the Bible?"

The fight which followed was stiff and long. The power of the young American cannon placed nearly opposite the church was taxed to its utmost. To-day any one passing the spot can see this cannon preserved as a relic where it then stood, looking the very baby it is in the face of modern warfare. The enemy proved overstrung, but winning men must eat, and of the rich farms then lying about Union supplies food for army and navy more than that of Gurdie and her spouse. One of this stalwart woman's strong points was her excellent housekeeping.

Near her great brick oven stood always a huge pot of indigo ready to dye the wool from the shorn sheep. Clean, smooth and in order, the loom also awaited her pleasure at weaving. Her water from "the north side of the well" was cooler than could be had elsewhere. Her cream invariably turned to butter. Gurdie could smooth out most folks' wrinkles.

When the muddy, swaggering feet of the British despoiled her polished floors she made it understood that they should rest in the cellar, where home-made wine was in casks, until she had prepared their meal. Leading to this place was a narrow flight of steps and an old-fashioned trap-door. It was, however, light and spacious, and the men cracked many a joke over their entertainment.

At last Gurdie called to them that their supper was ready. "Leave your guns stacked in the cellar," she said; "there's no room for them above." This they did and came tumbling up the stairs. Gurdie then closed the trap door with a spring, which only she knew. The men, suspecting nothing, fell eagerly to eating. To her stuttering husband outside the window she quickly passed the word, and thus a short while later a goodly number of unarmed men were carried off as prisoners by the American boys.

The signal which her husband gave about the town as he passed from man to man, and which has come to us through history, was simply the record of his clever wife's deed, "B-Gur-Gur-Gurdie's g-g-got th-th-the gu-gu-guns."—Washington Star.

Hanged, But Still Lives.

The action of the Supreme Court in sending the case of murderer James Hamilton back to Butler County for a new trial has a peculiar interest from the fact that Hamilton was hanged by the neck through a space of more than one hour and yet lived to describe the frightful sensation which he underwent while swinging at the end of a rope. In the spring of 1900 Hamilton killed George J. Webb, his boss, while working on a railroad not far from Eureka. The men had quarreled and Hamilton seized an axe and split Webb's head, causing instant death. He was captured by the other laborers and strung up to a tree. The men were not expert in tying the hangman's knot, however, and the rope did not compress Hamilton's neck tight enough to entirely shut off his breath.

After he had hung for more than an hour a farmer who chanced to be passing cut him down, but the men who had been watching from a little distance at once closed in and prepared to hang him again. And then followed a strange yet inspiring thing. The farmer stood over the body of the unconscious man and pleaded with the mob to let the law take its course. Little by little he won them over, until at last they consented to take Hamilton to El Dorado and turn him over to the authorities. He was tried, convicted and sentenced to twenty-one years in the penitentiary. His attorney appealed the case to the Supreme Court on a technicality. In the trial he had asked certain of the witnesses if they had not taken part in the hanging. The county attorney objected to this question, and the court ruled it out. The Supreme Court decided that the question was proper, and sent the case back for a new trial.—Kansas City Journal.

Mountain Climber's Bravery.

Sidney Cowan, a young man from Nashville, is receiving unstinted praise for his bravery in a mountain climbing accident at Forest Point, Tenn.

Miss Vinnie Tucker, a prominent young woman of Decherd and one of a party on a mountain trip, stepped over a cliff and Cowan sprang to her rescue. He caught her, but too late to prevent her fall, being dragged over the edge of the precipice, the two going down together and landing on the incline, thirty-five or forty feet below. Though Cowan was badly shaken up he was conscious, and, as his body rolled down the ledge it caught on a bush, which stayed his progress. Miss Tucker, cut and bleeding, was falling in the path he had come. As she passed he caught and held her, their flight ending three feet from the edge of a 300-foot drop. To have gone over would have meant instant death.

Their companions organized a rescue party and descended to the ledge by a narrow, circuitous path. Cowan was found clutching the girl's clothing in one hand and a clump of bushes in the other. Miss Tucker was insensible.

Fame.

The French Government has decided to install in the Pantheon, Paris, the famous pendulum by which Foucault, in 1857, demonstrated the rotation of the earth.

Oh, These Women.
The quickest way for one woman to get into another woman's favor is to appear to be jealous of her.—New York News.

CHILDREN'S DEPARTMENT.

A Dandelion Story.

Out in the meadow, brown and bare, stood a dandelion, with snow white hair. All his neighbors had gone to bed. But he wasn't sleepy, he proudly said. Perhaps he'd sit up the winter through. To play with the wind and the raindrops, too.

Poor little foolish Dandy!

A frolicsome breeze came hurrying by. And cried, as the flower he chanced to spy. "Why, my dear, it is late for you!" Then one long cold breath he blew. And over the meadows brown and bare floated a cloud of snow-white hair.

Poor little foolish Dandy!

—San Francisco Chronicle.

A New Game of Houseball.

The only thing necessary to play this new and fascinating game is a light bounding rubber ball and a wall unpierced by windows. Any number of players can take part. As each one "misses" the next player takes his or her place and so on, or each player may be provided with a ball. All starting at the same time, the player who first fails to catch the ball, goes to the foot of the line. The object of the game, of course, is to see who can stand at the head the longest.

Now stand any desired distance from the wall.

First—Throw the ball against the wall and catch it before it bounds.

Second—Throw the ball and before it descends fling the right arm up and touch quickly and lightly the right shoulder.

Third—Do likewise with the left hand.

Fourth—Repeat with both hands together.

Fifth—Bring both arms together in front on a level with the shoulders, clap the hands smartly together and fling the arms back wide apart, bringing them forward again immediately, again catching the ball.

Sixth—Throw the ball up. Putting powder clinging to the hand forms a sort of water-tight covering. As the powder is invisible at some distance, the performer can show his hand without fear of detection; the hand holding the object taken from the water will be absolutely dry.

This trick, if done with some cleverness, will not fail to be successful and entertaining.—New York Tribune.

A Trick in Lifting.

Show five pieces of straw or five thin sticks of wood and a coin, and ask the audience to try and lift them together in such a way that the performer holds only one of the pieces of straw or wood in his hand.

A Gentle Rebuke.

It is said of a gentle old Quakeress, who is blessed with seventeen grandchildren of various sizes and different disposition, that no one else in the family can administer a needed rebuke with the tact and wit which she displays, and that her words have seldom been known to give offense, says the Youth's Companion.

One of the youngest grandchildren is a boy of eight, who is possessed of a quick and retentive memory. Not long ago he was dilating upon this fact to his grandmother.

"Tisn't only in school I can remember things," he said, proudly. "It's

That kissed the maiden all forlorn.

entire weight on the left foot, point the right with toes turned downward in front of the body—from the front to the side, then back to position and catch the ball.

Seventh—Do the same thing with the left foot.

Eighth—Lift both arms on a level with the shoulders, palms turned up; turn palms down, bring arms to the side and then catch the ball.

Ninth—Stand with the arms at the sides. Before the ball descends place the hands on the hips with the thumbs back, then quickly bring them forward and catch the ball.

Tenth—As the ball comes toward you, bat it back with the palm of the hand and catch it on the rebound.

You will find if you stand a little heavier on your left foot than on your right, the right slightly in advance of the left, your shoulders wide apart and chin and eyes slightly raised, that this will give your body an easy poise and you will have more control over the various motions and be more easily able to finish the movements in time to catch the ball before it descends.

Dry Water.

A ring or coin is thrown into a basin filled with water; the performer announces that he will take the article out of the water without wetting his hand.

Solution: Get a few cents' worth of lycopodium powder and strew it over the surface of the water. The hand when being immersed will have to go through the layer of powder. The everywhere. I remember dates and names, and places where people live, and signs and placards, and all sorts of things. And in Sunday-school I always know the whole lesson by heart."

"That's an excellent thing, dear child," said the grandmother, placidly. "Did thee ever happen to learn the second verse of the twenty-seventh chapter of Proverbs?"

"No, grandama," said the little boy. "I haven't learned any proverbs yet, but I'll learn it to-night. It won't be anything to do, because I remember so easily."

But that night his cheeks were redder than usual as he read over and over: "Let another man praise thee, and not thine own mouth; a stranger, and not thine own lips."

Thought Wool Came From Wolf.

The menagerie of the tenement house child is populated mostly with mythical animals. Cats, dogs and itinerant goats are the only authentic specimens of the four footed race he knows. Therefore, he summons his imagination to supply the defects of knowledge, and the result is sometimes surprising. An example of this occurred some time ago in a kindergarten at the West Side Branch of the University Settlement.

Little Fabio, a bright little Italian boy, came rushing into the classroom fairly beaming with joy.

"I got wool gloves," he announced proudly producing from a ragged pocket a diminutive pair of red mittens, which he exhibited to his admiring friends.

"Fabio," said the teacher, after the first burst of envy had subsided, "I wonder if you can tell where that soft wool comes from?"

Fabio paused a moment and wrinkled his brow in deep thought.

"I know!" he exclaimed suddenly, a wave of inspiration passing over his countenance. "Wool comes from the wolf, of course!"—New York Tribune.

The automobile has come to stay. In a decade the horse on the road will be where the sail is at sea, used only when speed is of no consequence, by the farmer in one case and by the fisherman in the other and by the rich for pleasure. The horse and sailing yacht, the farmer's cart and the fishing smack and economical freighting, on poor roads by the horse as at sea by the schooner, will survive together. For the rest the horse must go. The automobile must come and stay. It is a nuisance, and a dangerous nuisance. It scares horses, it worries walkers, it has fear before and a stench behind, but it is here, and stay it must. Abolition is impossible. Regulation is necessary.

KIDNEY TROUBLES.

Mrs. Louise M. Gibson Says That This Fatal Disease Is Easily Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I felt very discouraged two years ago, I had suffered so long with kidney troubles and other complications, and had taken so much medicine without relief that I began to think there was no hope for me. Life looked so good to me, but what is life without health? I wanted to be well.

MRS. LOUISE M. GIBSON.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me and made me well, and that is why I gladly write you this, and gladly thank you; six bottles was all I took, together with your Pills. My headache and backache and kidney trouble went, never to return; the burning sensation I had left altogether; my general health was so improved I felt as young and light and happy as at twenty."—Mrs. Louise Gibson, 4813 Langley Ave., Chicago, Ill.—$5000 forfeit if above testimonial is not genuine.

If you feel that there is anything at all unusual or puzzling about your case, or if you wish confidential advice of the most experienced, write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., and you will be advised free of charge. ## WHY "KICK?"

Scarcely a day passes when one does not hear some criticism of the management of the street railways and from the persistency with which it occurs the average man seems to believe that these street railway corporations are nothing but gigantic octopuses grasping everything and giving nothing in return and any connection the street railway company has with public affairs is suspected to be under handed and full of trickery. The ever present watch-dog of the treasury demands a price that would be prohibitive for every privileged or franchise asked for by the roads, and any personal contact between a public official and a representative of the company is at once branded as an intrigue in the interests of the corporation. But how many of these chronic fault-finders have ever stopped a moment to consider what the country would be without railways? How many really know what each city or town gets annually for the franchises? How many realize that, exclusive of street repairs and removal of snow,—by no means a small item, the cities and towns in which the Boston Elevated system is operated last year were paid ten per cent of the gross receipts of the company while the dividends to stock holders were less than six per cent, or in other words the public received nearly twice as much as the owners of the road as the result of the operation of the road in a single year. Another feature too often overlooked is the increased valuation of property by reason of the roads and the great convenience the roads afford the public generally. When all these things are fully realized there will be less chronic grumbling about the greed of these corporations.

BROWN TAILS AGAIN.

The brown tail moth is getting in its work in various sections of the town and the sere and yellow leaf is getting ahead of Jack Frost on account of the visit of the brown tail moth. These moths will require attention as soon as the leaves fall from the trees, if the foliage of another summer is to be preserved. The town should be awake to the danger and provide sufficient funds to do effective work when the trees are bare, as much more can be accomplished then than at other seasons.

It is a matter of Congratulation that our esteemed fellow townsman Ex-Gov. Brackett was not seriously injured by his recent experience in boarding an electric car in Boston.

The citizens and newspapers of the towns and cities which enter Boston at the North Union station are agitating the subject of a covered passageway from the North Station to the elevated railroad. No doubt the arranging for such a passageway may be a much more serious problem than at the South Terminal but it is not so difficult but what all obstacles may be overcome if the two railroads will get together and consider the comforts of their patrons, and there is little doubt that this will be accomplished by these two enterprising roads in due course of time, although a little judicious urging on the part of their patrons may not be inopportune.

ARLINGTON LOCALS.

A ping-pong table is the latest acquisition at Small's pool room in the Finance block.

Republican Caucus tonight.

Frank P. Dyer has been nominated notary public by Gov. Crane.

A. S. Roberts of Allston has rented and will soon occupy a suite in one of W. S. Norris' buildings at 1253 Massachusetts avenue.

The Cambridge Young Men's Christian association have been distributing its annual prospectus for the season of 1902-3 about town which points out the great opportunity the association offers young men to secure physical training, practical evening education, social fellowship, development of the better life, and a chance to be of service to others.

Mr. W. E. Marshall's production "A Fair Lady" is among the group of the representative New England works, which with specimens of foreign work recently exhibited by the New England Photographers association, is upon exhibition at the Mechanics Fair. This collection of "Art in Photography" is one of the features of the fair and occupies an entire side of one of the galleries of the grand hall.

Mr. O'Leary's house on Bow street is nearly completed.

Alexander Beaton the contractor has commenced operation on a new house on Tanager street for E. A. Snow.

Extensive improvements are being made upon the grounds of the residence of Theodore Blanchard on Acton street.

Mr. William Mundle has sold the business of the Crescent Grocery, corner of Massachusetts and Park avenues, to Frank Foster of Boston. Mr. Foster is a live and progressive business man and has a store on Harrison avenue but intends to make Arlington Heights his residence. The ENTERPRISE bespeaks for him the same generous patronage that has been accorded Mr. Mundle in the past.

George Irving has returned from his trip to Canada.

Walter Jardine has returned from the beach where he had a cottage.

Louis Schwaub has returned after a two weeks' vacation.

The first meeting of the Arlington Historical Society will be held on Tuesday evening, Sept. 30.

The widow of N. J. Hardy, the caterer has attracted considerable attention the past week. On a dainty dish, in the center of an attractive window display, there are a number of small pieces of coal with the following inscription "Very rare 10 cents each."

Messrs. Lloyd and Arthur Bickley of Boston have returned from Orr's Island, Me. Mrs. Bickley and Misses Margaret and Edith are expected home this week.

Mrs. Kohlhaas and her younger daughter returned to their Chicago home on Tuesday, September 16.

T. M. Canniff, the "midway" barber, has a new hair tonic that is meeting with great success.

The Loyal Temperance legion held its first session since the summer vacation, in St. John's Parish House, on Monday last, at four o'clock, under the direction of Rev. James Yeames, the superintendent. The Legion will meet each Monday at the same hour and all children are invited to attend.

Clarke's real estate agency reports a demand for lower or medium priced stores and offices. Evidently the winding up of affairs of several business places in town within the past few weeks is not so discouraging after all.

Harry Colby, the popular knight of the razor at Langen's hairdressing rooms, is on a visit to his home in Bath, Me. His chair is being operated by J. Barry who recently closed the doors of his place of business.

Miss Edith Mann of Wallaston avenue opened the fall term of her music class last week, also her kindergarten classes.

As usual Arlington is sending a large number to the various schools and colleges. The Misses Helen Buhlert and Florence Hicks have returned for the senior year at Wellesley, while Miss Elizabeth Colman goes back as junior, Miss Emma Puffer returns as a senior to Radcliffe, and Miss Helena returns for her sophomore year, while Misses Marion Churchill and Therese Norton enter. Miss Helen Brigham may also although she may decide to go to Mount Holyoke College. Miss Louise Cooper enters Boston University. The Misses Annie and Helen Wood have returned for their junior year at Vassar. Frank Fitzpatrick and Fred Butterfield return to Harvard while Louis Moore and Allen Taft enter. Lloyd Bickley and Philip Patterson go back to Lawrence Scientific school. David Elwell, Jules White, and Howard and Everett Turner continue their studies at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, which institution Arthur Trowbridge enters. Harry Dole will probably enter one of the scientific schools.

Mr. J. E. Laugen denies the rumor that in some way has gained currency to the effect that he wishes to sell his hairdressing business.

Under the new law the civil sessions of the Middlesex superior court will open this year the first Monday in October instead of the first Monday in September as formerly.

Wetherbee Brothers have issued a neat folder announcing their lines of work. It bears a good cut of the brothers in their new delivery automobile. "Teddy" Bartlett, the veteran bill distributor, circulated around town with them and never missed a house.

The firm of Knowles and Marden, plumbers, in the Finance block has been dissolved by order of the court and Lindsay K. Foster has been placed in temporary receivership in order to facilitate in the adjustment of partnership affairs. Mr. Knowles will continue the business, having hired the workshops and implements from the receiver.

Mr. Lucian C. Tyler, one of Arlington's oldest and most prosperous business men, has retired from active business. This week he disposed of his stock in trade to Raymond of Boston to close up the business. Mr. Tyler has occupied this store for nearly 30 years, but owing to his increasing years and his health not being as good, he retires to give his whole attention to the various town offices which he occupies.

Ex-Gov. Brackett had a narrow escape in Boston, one afternoon last week when he tried to board a trolley car which was still in motion, though not rapidly. He was dragged nearly to the Old Corner Bookstore, and a good many of the crowd who recognized him evidently feared that he would be killed right before their eyes.

There is a picture of a familiar face in another column—that of a man who can let you have a reliable turnout to carry you and your girl home when your automobile "balks."

Mr. F. H. Clarke, manager of the Arlington Telephone exchange returned Monday morning from Twin Mountain, N. H., where he with Mrs. Clark and her mother, Mrs. E. A. Howe, have been vacationing. Mr. Clark brought with him a wild strawberry plant picked Sunday by Mrs. Clark, which has two perfectly developed and ripe berries, several green berries, also blossoms. Where these were found the ground is covered with blossoms and only a week before the mercury registered two degrees below freezing point. Mr. Clark and party were registered at the Rosebrook Inn.

Police Officer Smith returned to duty last night after two weeks vacation at Portland, Me. Mr. Smith is enthusiastic over his trip, the natural beauties of the Forest City and the genuine hospitality he received from the police officers upon whom he visited.

Chief of Police A. S. Harriman was yesterday at his post of duty after a week's illness.

Messrs. H. L. Frost & Co., the entomologists, are doing a large amount of work in destruction of the Brown-tail moths, especially in their North Shore department, the headquarters of which is at Beverly.

A dead horse and a broken gate at the Arlington Centre railroad crossing is the result of carelessness of two drivers who left their horses feeding, unbridled and unhitched in front of Daniels' Newstore within forty feet of the railway tracks, while they took their lunch at a nearby eating house. As the 1.04 train Monday came along, one pair was frightened and wheeled around, colliding with the gate which was broke off short. One horse falling was hit by the steps of the rear car and its skull fractured so that it had to be shot. The two teams belonged to H. R. Leighton, a market gardener of Billerica. The other horse received slight scratches only.

Arthur L. Marston entertained quite a number of his friends at the home of his parents, 53 Irving street, last Friday evening, the occasion being his 21st birthday. Games and music filled up a very pleasant evening, a collation being served. Mr. Marston was the recipient of a number of presents among which was a handsome gold watch from his mother and sisters and a chain from the young ladies from the Arlington high school, class of '02.

Motormen on the Arlington-Reading division of the Boston & Northern railway have been instructed not to use the whistles on their cars only when absolutely necessary.

The Arlington-Reading division of the Boston & Northern railway may not be equipped with vestibuled cars this winter, and the management may ask for an extension of time. The reason is the impossibility of getting the new cars, and it is quite likely that the Boston elevated lines will not be fully equipped although the first vestibuled car arrived on Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Frost and daughter, Beatrice, of Pleasant street, will spend the winter in California, leaving Oct. 2. They will be with their son, Albert, well known in town, who is located in Placencia and operates a large fruit orchards there.

NOTES FROM WASHINGTON.

Navy's First Need—The initial step toward the determination of the character of the recommendations to be made to the president and congress by the navy department concerning the further increase of the navy has been taken by Secretary Moody in directions to the board of construction to consider this important matter and submit its views at the earliest time practicable. Mr. Moody told the board that in discussing the naval construction program it should have regard for the present lack of officers and men, and determine whether it was wise, on account of the embarrassing shortness of personnel, to build more ships until an adequate increase in the commissioned and enlisted forces had been provided by congress. The board was told also to express its opinion on the advisability of asking congress to appropriate for new ships every two years instead of every year, the policy up to this time.

The Next Speaker—It seems to be taken for granted in Washington that if David B. Henderson persists in his determination not to stand for reelection to the Fifty-eighth congress, Congressman Joseph G. Cannon of Illinois will be the nominee of the Republican caucus for speaker. It is well known to "Uncle Joe's" friends that it is the ambition of his life to be speaker of the house. He thinks this a higher honor than a senatorship from Illinois. The only formidable rival that would have appeared is Representative James S. Sherman of Utica, and, as he is slated for railroad commissioner of the state of New York to succeed Col. George W. Dunn, he cannot be considered as a speakership candidate.

Then and Now—Twenty years ago the typewriter had not come into use, the talking machine had not been perfected. The legislative or court reporter of those days, after taking his notes, dictated to stenographic amanuenses, who wrote out their copy in long hand. Old reporters on the present floor can recall many occasions in the days gone by when the rays of the rising sun have shone on the white dome of the big building on the hill and lit up the silent seats of the public lawmakers before they had sent their last copy to the printer and left for the day—the day before to be accurate. The invention of the typewriter and talking machine have changed this condition of affairs. What is the method of reporting a debate in congress today? In the house of representatives the five official stenographers divide the note taking between them, each recording at one time what will make a column in the Congressional Record. When a man has taken his "turn" he descends to the basement of the building and talks the "turn" into a machine.

"Boss Shepherd Dead"—Alexander R. Shepherd, once territorial governor of the District of Columbia, who planned and carried out the public improvements which made Washington a beautiful city, died of appendicitis at Batopilas, Mexico, on Friday, in the 68th year of his age. He was born in Washington, where he early embarked in business. After a short service in the civil war Mr. Shepherd was elected president of the city council of Washington, and later, when a territorial form of government for the district was established, he was appointed governor by President Grant. The municipal improvements he inaugurated and carried out transformed the city, but resulted in the abolition of that form of government and the making of charges of corruption against him, which an investigation failed to sustain. Some years ago, when he returned from Batopilas, where for a long time he had engaged in silver mining on an extensive scale, the citizens of Washington paid him unusual honors in recognition of his services to the city.

Visitors to Stratford-on-Avon complain that small boys run after them, calling "All about Shakespeare for a ha'penny."
